Biographical Note

H. P. Lovecraft is widely considered the twentieth century's most important writer of supernatural horror fiction. Forging a unique niche within the horror genre, he created what became known as "weird tales," stories containing a distinctive blend of dreamlike imagery, Gothic terror, and elaborate concocted mythology. During his lifetime Lovecraft published work almost exclusively in pulp magazines, and only after his death in 1937 did he receive a wide readership and critical analysis. While many disparage his writings as verbose, melodramatic, and inconsequential, others extol his precise narrative skills and capacity to instill the unsettling. He has been placed among the ranks of such storytellers as Lord Dunsany, Arthur Machen, and Edgar Allan Poe, but, as August Derleth pointed out in H. P. L.: A Memoir, "Lovecraft was an original in the Gothic tradition; he was a skilled writer of supernatural fiction, a master of the macabre who had no peer in the America of his time."

According to Curt Wohleber in American Heritage, Lovecraft was "the man who brought the . . . thriving genre of supernatural fiction into the twentieth century. . . . Lovecraft abandoned the demons, ghosts, and vampires of his nineteenth-century predecessors in favor of modern horrors inspired by Darwinian evolution and Einsteinian physics."

Born in 1890 in Providence, Rhode Island, Lovecraft grew up in the affluent and intellectual surroundings of his grandfather’s Victorian mansion. Sickly as a child and only able to attend school sporadically, he was an avid reader, fascinated by eighteenth-century history and Gothic horror stories. He was particularly interested in science and began to write about it at an early age. Following the death of his grandfather in 1904, Lovecraft and his mother moved from the family mansion to a nearby duplex (his father, a virtual stranger to Lovecraft, had died some years earlier after spending the last years of his life in a sanitorium). Lovecraft would later relate that, raised by a sensitive and overprotective mother, he grew up in relative isolation, believing he was unlike other people.

Chronic sickness as a teenager prevented Lovecraft from finishing high school or attending college. He continued his self-education and supported himself by working as a ghostwriter and revisionist--vocations that, though disliked by Lovecraft, would financially sustain him throughout his life. An admirer of Poe, he had begun writing horror tales but, deeming them meager efforts, devoted himself to amateur journalism. In addition, he contributed nonfiction and poetry to magazines. In 1914 Lovecraft joined the United Amateur Press Association, a group of nonprofessional writers who produced a variety of publications and exchanged letters, and one year later he began publishing his own magazine, The Conservative. His numerous letters and essays written during this time focus on his deep respect for scientific truth, his love of the past, and his relative disdain for a present-day world populated by non-Anglo-Nordic citizens. Lovecraft developed the belief, to quote
Darrell Schweitzer in The Dream Quest of H. P. Lovecraft, "that only by clinging to tradition could we make life worth living amidst the chaos of modern civilization."

Lovecraft resumed writing fiction in 1917 and, at the behest of friends, began submitting stories to Weird Tales, a pulp magazine that would serve as the major publisher of Lovecraft's writings during his lifetime. Critics note that many of his early tales are heavily influenced by Irish fantasist Lord Dunsany. Such stories as "Dagon," "The White Ship," "The Silver Key," "The Doom That Came to Sarnath," and "The Cats of Ulthar" stem from fairy tale tradition, exhibiting rich dreamlike descriptions and imaginary settings. "This early cycle culminated in the extraordinary short novel Lovecraft called The Dream Quest of Unknown Kadath," stated Lin Carter in his introduction to Ballantine's edition of the work. The story of protagonist Randolph Carter's search for a magnificent city he once envisioned, The Dream Quest of Unknown Kadath depicts Carter's voyage into the world of his dreams, where wondrous landscapes and fantastic creatures exist. "Few more magical novels of dream-fantasy exist than this phantasmagoric adventure," declared Carter.

"[Never have] the fluid and changing landscapes, the twilit and mysterious silences, and the spire-thronged and opulent Oriental cities of the dreamworld been so lovingly explored."

Contrasting to these relatively innocuous stories of fantasy are Lovecraft's tales of horror, remarkable for their bizarre supernatural conceptions rooted in the realism of a New England setting. Lovecraft was captivated by what he considered the ideal beauty of New England's traditional landscape and architecture. However, he was also intrigued by a perceived darker dimension. His stories "The Unnameable" and "The Picture in the House," for example, depict corruption and superstition that persist in secluded New England areas. "The Festival" illustrates unearthly rituals practiced in the picturesque town of Kingsport--a village Lovecraft modeled after Marblehead, Massachusetts, and "Pickman's Model" focuses on a group of ghouls inhabiting modern Boston. Similar to these stories is the novel The Case of Charles Dexter Ward, in which the title character engages in magic to resurrect a seventeenth-century ancestor named Curwen. A practitioner of the black arts in Salem, Curwen is determined to inflict his evil on modern Massachusetts and consequently takes over the identity of Ward, who is later saved by the family doctor.

The best known of Lovecraft's stories are his later ones centering on the "Cthulhu Mythos," a term critics use to describe a distinctive universe of landscape, legends, and mythology completely of Lovecraft's invention. Like his earlier tales, the Cthulhu Mythos works are inspired by New England locales, but their settings are extensively recast to form Arkham, Innsmouth, and Dunwich, fictional worlds overseen by Cthulhu, Yog-Sothoth, and other gods. These stories, explained Lovecraft as quoted by August Derleth, "are based on the fundamental lore or legend that this world was inhabited at one time by another race who, in practising black magic, lost their foothold and were expelled, yet live on the outside ever ready to take possession of this earth again." Tales governed by this principle include "The Nameless City," "The Call of the Cthulhu," "The Whisperer in the Darkness," and At the Mountains of Madness.

In addition to writing weird tales, Lovecraft maintained an extensive correspondence and continued to generate a number of essays. Through these nonfiction outlets, he expounded on the aesthetics of supernatural horror fiction and on such philosophies as "mechanistic materialism" and "cosmic indifferentism"--the idea that the universe is a purposeless mechanism wherein humankind is largely insignificant. Lovecraft also produced a relatively large body of poetry, mostly imitative of eighteenth-century masters. Though he wrote prolifically, only one book, 1936's The Shadow over Innsmouth, realized publication during his lifetime. When Lovecraft died of intestinal cancer at the age of forty-six, the bulk of his writings remained either scattered in magazines or unpublished.

Later, Lovecraft's friends and fellow writers August Derleth and Donald Wandrei brought his writings to a wide readership. Establishing the publishing house of Arkham expressly to bring Lovecraft's work into book form, Derleth and Wandrei edited such early collections as The Outsider and Others in 1939 and Beyond the Wall of Sleep in 1943. Numerous volumes of the horror writer's work have been collected by Arkham and other publishers over subsequent decades, and this broader circulation has spawned an extensive and diverse body of analysis.

Admirers of Lovecraft point to several elements in his fiction that distinguish him as a master of supernatural horror. Foremost is his ability to evoke terror through the creation of an unseen and unearthy presence. Lovecraft once explained in his lengthy essay, Supernatural Horror in Literature, that in order for fiction to instill fear, "a certain atmosphere of breathless and unexpected dread of outer, unknown forces must be present." Particularly impressed by Lovecraft's capacity to induce anxiety in this way was Angela Carter, who described in an essay appearing in George Hay's The Necronomicon: "The twisted shapes of the trees in the woods above Arkham are emanations of the menace they evoke--menace, anguish, perturbation, dread. The cities themselves, whether those of old New England or those that lie beyond the gates of dream, present the dreadful enigma of a maze, always labyrinthe and always, the Minotaur at the heart of this labyrinth, lies the unspeakable in some form or else in some especially vile state of formlessness--the unspeakable, a nameless and unnameable fear."

While some critics have been satisfied that Lovecraft effectively arouses fear solely through developing a sense of imminent dread, others pointed to an extra element in his fiction that creates a more powerful terror. Donald Burleson explained in H. P. Lovecraft: A Critical Study: "The horror, ultimately, in a Lovecraft tale is not some gelatinous lurker in dark places, but rather the realization, by the characters involved, of their helplessness and their insignificance in the scheme of things--their terribly ironic predicament of being sufficiently well-developed organisms to perceive and feel the poignancy of their own motelike unimportance in a blind and chaotic universe which neither loves them nor even finds them worthy of notice, let alone hatred or hostility." Steven J. Mariconda, writing in Lovecraft Studies, expressed a similar sentiment, calling Lovecraft's tales "cosmic horror . . . the horror of unknowable forces or beings which sweep men aside as indifferently as men do ants."

Other uncommon components marking Lovecraft's work include his manner of combining sterile scientific facts with arcane mysticism. Lovecraft "was uniquely able to link the inner substance of former spiritual beliefs with the most recent scientific discoveries," explained Schweitzer. "He used a rational, mechanistic context to get his readers to the edge of the abyss--and then dropped them over. The result was an irrational horror grimmer than anything a Puritan could conjure up." Critics also admired Lovecraft's ability to agitate his readers by creating an atmosphere of chaos. Lovecraft's universe, according the Maurice Levy in Lovecraft: A Study in the Fantastic, is a place of "bizarre dimensions . . . where time and space stretch or contract in incomprehensible ways." These various features of Lovecraft's fiction lead many reviewers to conclude, as Dirk Mosig did in Whispers, that "[Lovecraft's oeuvre] is a work of genius, a cosmic-minded oeuvre embodying a mechanistic materialist's brilliant conception of the imaginary realms and frightful reality 'beyond the fields we know,' a literary rhapsody of the cosmos and man's laughable position therein. . . . The Lovecraft oeuvre can be regarded as a significant contribution to world literature."

Despite extensive praise, controversy exists over Lovecraft's position in American letters. "At his best . . . [Lovecraft] was a superior literary technician," wrote Schweitzer. "At his worst, he was one of the more dreadful writers of this century who is still remembered." Other critics have been less gentle. Deeming Lovecraft "a totally untalented and unreadable writer" as well as "a hopeless and rather pitiful literary crank," Larry McMurtry dismissed Lovecraft in the Washington Post as "the master of the turgid and the inflated." Colin Wilson, in Strength to Dream: Literature and the Imagination, further attacked the author's prose, claiming, "Lovecraft hurls in the adjectives ('monstrous,' 'slithering,' 'ghoulish,' 'thunder-crazed') until he seems to be a kind of literary dervish who gibbers with hysteria as he spins. . . . [It] must be admitted that Lovecraft is a very bad writer." Even more scornful was Ursula Le Guin, who announced in the Times Literary Supplement that Lovecraft "was an exceptionally, almost impeccably, bad writer. . . . Derivative, inept, and callow, his tales can satisfy only those who believe that a capital letter, some words, and a full stop make a sentence."

Curt Wohleber described Lovecraft's prose as "florid" and "Gothic," but the reviewer nevertheless concluded that Lovecraft "explored the territories of alienation surveyed with much different instruments by Sartre, Kafka, and Beckett." Lovecraft himself made no pretensions of possessing great writing talent. "No one is more acutely conscious than I of the inadequacy of my work. . . . I am a self-confessed amateur and bungler, and have not much hope of improvement," the author confessed in "The Defense Reopens!," an article later collected in S. T. Joshi's In Defense of Dagon. He did, however, consider himself a serious artist, practitioner, and theorist. Lovecraft "demanded that the fantastic tale be treated as art, not just a frivolous parlor game or an easy way to make a buck," wrote Schweitzer.

Placing himself among those whom he considered "imaginative artists," such as Poe, Dunsany, William Blake, and Ambrose Bierce, Lovecraft explained in "The Defense Reopens!": "The imaginative writer devotes himself to art in its most essential sense. . . . He is the painter of moods and mind-pictures--a capturer and amplifier of elusive dreams and fancies--a voyager into those unheard-of lands which are glimpsed through the veil of actuality but rarely, and only by the most sensitive. . . . Most persons do not understand what he says, and most of those who do understand object because his statements and pictures are not always pleasant and sometimes quite impossible. But he exists not for praise, nor thinks of his readers. His only [goal is] to paint the scenes that pass before his eyes."

Box 2,  Alcestis  undated
TMS, 24.0 p.

Scope and Contents note

With minor manuscript corrections. This manuscript consists of a Prologue (10 pages) and the play itself (14 pages). A single page titled Alcestis - Prologue and written entirely in HPL's hand is listed under "Drama: 1910-1937." This manuscript was originally signed "Sonia
H. Greene” and at a later date the name "Davis" was added.

Box 2, The Psychic Phenomenon of Love TM, 5.0 p.

Scope and Contents note

Carbon copy with minor manuscript corrections. This manuscript allegedly incorporates sections of a letter that SHD received from HPL. The passages attributed to HPL are so marked. It was submitted to August Derleth for publication by Arkham House but AWD refused to publish it (see AWD to SHD, 1966 Dec 3).

Box 2, The Psychic Phenomenon of Love undated

Scope and Contents note

Xerox copy only, location of original is unknown. This manuscript contains 3 pages lacking in the above entry. It concludes with a note by SHD: "It was Lovecraft's part of this letter that I believe made me fall in love with him; but he did not carry out his own dictum; time and place, and reversion of some of his thoughts and expressions did not bode for happiness."

Series 2, Correspondence from Lovecraft to August W. Derleth, Scope and Contents note

The H. P. Lovecraft Papers contain a microfilm copy (Hay Microfilm F6134) of 421 letters written by HPL to August W. Derleth between 1926 and 1937. The originals of these letters are in the August W. Derleth Collection at the State Historical Society of Wisconsin in Madison WI. Brown University Library acquired the microfilm from August W. Derleth in 1970. This microfilm was examined and the letters were tentatively dated by S. T. Joshi in his article "H. P. Lovecraft: Letters to August Derleth, 1926-1937. A Bibliographical Listing," "The Cynic," 1, No. 1 [March 1977], 1-10.

Scope and Contents note

With envelope postmarked Dec. 24, 1926 HPL is flattered by Wandrei’s desire to read more of his tales.
"[Polaris] and [Celephais] are lent to another correspondent, & I will send them to you as soon as he returns them. Of [Nyarlathotep] I have no available copy ... I find that I have no copies of The Quest of Iranon, Herbert West-Reanimator, or The Shunned House; ... Sooner or later The Shunned House may be privately printed in an amateur magazine, while I intend to make another copy of [Iranon] from the rough draught. Of those I am now mailing you, at least two are among my poorest work - From Beyond & Beyond the Wall of Sleep. The Strange High House in the Mist is my newest completed piece, written last month. Of the MS. of [Psychopompos] I'll have to ask you to be very careful, since it is almost worn to powder. I abhor typing, so dread the job of doing this over again. ... With me, as probably with you, the chief pleasure of creation is the creative process itself; so that when I get a picture perfectly crystallised in my mind without writing a story I no longer have the urge to write it - the demand having been already satisfied. In the case of the present novel, I left most of the incidents rather indeterminate; so that there is much of suspense & expectancy still remaining" for there is no demand for these MSS. elsewhere. ... I'm glad you've sent for The Hermaphrodite, which is the most purely classical poem written in this generation. Loveman is an authentic genius ... My novel, though it may represent industry & application, isn't likely to represent much more. Pressure of other things has delayed work on it lately, but I shall probably have it done - & running to 100-odd pages - in a month or so. The older I get, the longer my tales tend to run - so that today I hardly could write a brief bit like [Polaris] and [Nyarlathotep] ... Your projected bibliography [of weird literature] exceeds in scope anything of the kind which I had planned"

Scope and Contents note

HPL has favorably mentioned Wandrei's work to the Editor of Weird Tales "The early date of some of your work is indeed interesting - & would surely never be suspected from the text itself. I began concocting weird stuff incredible ages ago, & have some infantile things [ The Mysterious Ship, The Secret of the Grave, &c.] written when I was eight. The earliest tale that I continue to take seriously - The Beast in the Cave was written at the age of fourteen; & even this will have to be revised extensively before it can be published. My style in those days was a pompous Johnsonese, for I am an antiquarian by nature, & never used to read a modern book if I could possibly find anything with long S's to take its place. ... My novel - or novelette, since it came to 110 pages - is now finished, & I have given it the provisional title of The Dream-Quest of Unknown Kadath."
I am not sure how well I like it, but you will certainly see it as soon as it is in typed form horror and fantastic strains represented in this assortment - naturally I tend to veer betwixt the two, but professionally-minded people urge me to stick to horror as the more marketable commodity. I am just now reacting against this advice, as you will see from The Silver Key, which is recent. The Lurking Fear was done to order for a wretchedly sensational magazine four years ago ... Some day I may re-write it decently as a continuous unit. In [Polaris] - written in 1918 - you will see how close I came to the Dunsany style before I ever heard of Dunsany. My discovery of D. took place in the autumn of 1919, & produced a profound effect upon me - you will see instant reflections in The White Ship, Celephais, The Other Gods, The Doom that Came to Sarnath, &c. Pegana only knows when I'll get my 110-page affair typed - & the same applies to the tale on which I'm now at work, [p. 58] & which may get to 75 pages or so before its natural and logical conclusion appears. It centres around old Providence, & I shall call it either The Case of Charles Dexter Ward, or The Madness Out of Time." A long P.S. written on verso of envelope novelettes typed, but I have just written another tale of the same length as [Cthulhu] ... This deals with a terror that came to earth on a meteor, & is called The Colour out of Space ... Yes - it is certainly hard to find anyone interested in the weird. I never encountered one till 1917, when I stumbled simultaneously on Cook & Loveman. Then, through Loveman I got in touch with Smith; & had meanwhile come across Long. Through Weird Tales I encountered young August W. Scope and Contents note

With envelope postmarked Apr. 12, 1927 "What you say of St. Paul interests me very much, & I really think I'd prefer it to New York. You can't imagine the horror of being engulfed in a maelstrom of repulsive Orientals whose aberrant physiognomies & rat-like temperaments grate more & more on the sensibilities of an aesthetically impressionable person. New York represents such a stupendous ruin & decay - such a hideous replacement of virile & sound-heritaged stock by whipped, cringing, furtive dregs & offscourings - that I don't see how anyone can live long in it without sickening. The plebeian parts of our own New England towns are bad enough with their jabbering Latins - but New York passes all bounds. Only Dante could do it justice - one prays for a merciful earthquake to end the blasphemous tragedy. ... The gang in N.Y. is so long in returning the carbon of my Colour out of Space that I'm herewith sending the original MS. of which I'll ask you to be very careful, since it is the copy which will invade the editorial premises of such magazines as I decide to approach. ... it is purely & simply an atmospheric study, & from the fictional standpoint is woefully lacking in climax. I have several new tales in mind - some potentially marketable, & others of too great bizarrerie for popular reception"

Incomplete, final leaf [II] only Date inferred from contents. Contains drawing of a scene [featuring indications of a steeple and a ship’s rigged mast] as viewed through the doorway from inside of the John Brown House. Later mentions: "My trip was certainly the premier event of recent years. First I visited W. Paul Cook in Athol, & was taken by him [to] ... colonial Deerfield, primitive Vermont, & picturesque New Hampshire. In West Brattleboro we called on ... Arthur Goodenough ... I went by stage-coach to Boston, stopped at the Y, & the next day took the coach for Portland ... From Portland I retraced my steps to Portsmouth [then] ... I proceeded to Newburyport." HPL later visited Gloucester, Rockport, the Magnolia Cliffs, Manchester, Beverly, Salem, Marblehead, Lynn and Boston "before reaching home Friday midnight."
Closes: "Are you returning to Columbia this year? Don’t let the bookplate matter bother you, & don’t attempt any difficult design where a simpler one is possible"

Providence, RI
1927 [Nov?]
ANS, 1.0 p.

Scope and Contents note

Written on the back of an envelope from "The Athol Transcript Co" W. Paul Cook was visiting HPL and they both indulged themselves by buying books. "Today I'm taking the last [possibly] of my autumn outings. Am guiding Cook on his way to Norwich, & shall leave him at a point slightly west of Thornton ... Shall be knocking about the countryside all day .. I'll take dinner downtown or here. Looks like a good day - I'm wearing the old brown suit." Probably written during Cook's visit with HPL in November, 1927 [see [SL] 302, to Frank Belknap Long, Jr., 1927 November]

Scope and Contents note

Dated "Decr. 19" only, with envelope postmarked Dec. 20, 1927 HPL discusses his dreams and then notes: "To Zara is one of the concoctions of my hoax-&-parody period, & was written in about half an hour in Belknap’s presence in August 1922 ... It was a product of a discussion on some of Poe’s stylistic mannerisms in verse - & I think one of the lines was suggested by Belknap, though I can't recall which. We sent it to your marvellous prodigy-prototype Alfred Galpin, & it deceived him to the extent of making him think it was taken from the minor work of some actual poet"

Incomplete, final leaf [II] only Contains drawing of a Providence scene [featuring indications of a steeple and a ship’s rigged mast] as viewed through the doorway from inside of the John Brown House. Later mentions: "My trip was certainly the premier event of recent years. First I visited W. Paul Cook in Athol, & was taken by him [to] ... colonial Deerfield, primitive Vermont, & picturesque New Hampshire. In West Brattleboro we called on ... Arthur Goodenough ... I went by stage-coach to Boston, stopped at the Y, & the next day took the coach for Portland ... From Portland I retraced my steps to Portsmouth [then] ... I proceeded to Newburyport.” HPL then visited Gloucester, Rockport, the Magnolia Cliffs, Manchester, Beverly, Salem, Marblehead, Lynn and Boston “before reaching home Friday midnight." Closes: "Are you returning

Dwyer on May 11-15]. He later acknowledges that "I have indeed heard from our sacerdotal friend  Harold,' & received a copy of the Beebe High Catechism of All the Mayas, or something to that effect." In closing he mentions: "By the way - have you heard of the riots between your fellow Brunonians & the police? The ancient hill hasn't seen so much liveliness since the French troops & their horses were stabled in the College Edifice during the revolution!" .pf .sele 356

Dated "Saturday" only "I am no longer a prophet without honour in my own country. The literary editor of the [Journal] - Bertrand K. Hart - has started a daily 'column' called The Sideshow, & quite lately opened a discussion as to what the weirdest tale in all literature is. I couldn't resist sending him my [Recluse] article, plus lists of best weird tales prepared by myself, Belknap, & August Derleth ... I have again 'made' E.J. O'Brien's year book - with a three-star item - this time 'The Dunwich Horror' ... had a great Thanksgiving - dragged my elder aunt Mrs. Clark to Brennan's for a gorgeous feast" [Thanksgiving was November 28]

Dated "April fiftaneth" only HPL will be arriving in Manhattan on "Thursday the 24&'sup[th]." He plans to accompany Frank Belknap Long, Jr. to Atlantic City, NJ and then be "continuing southward alone" to Charleston, SC. Arkham House incorrectly places this letter in 1929 when April 24 was a Wednesday

Box 9a, Lovecraft, Howard P. to Toldridge, Elizabeth Providence, RI
ALS, 10.0 p.

Scope and Contents note

Apparently undated by HPL Although "April 24, 1930" is typed at the head of this manuscript letter, it was probably added at a later time by someone else. Begins: "Before starting on the long trip - beginning with a visit of a week or two at young Long's in N.Y." which implies a time of composition before April 24&sup[th] when HPL planned to arrive in Manhattan [see letter above]. However, the year is correct because HPL later states: "My Vermont story is stalled on page 32 ... I may take it along with me to do in Charleston" [The Whisperer in Darkness was "Provisionally finished Charleston, S.C., May 7, 1930". Arkham House incorrectly dates this letter as Apr. 24, 1930.

Scope and Contents note

Date inferred from contents Dated "Thor's Day" only. September 4, 11, 18 and 25 were Thursdays. Thanks WBT "for the glimpse of the Wyverns, which certainly looks to me like a damn good story." Later notes: "In 1929 I saw the New Bedford Whaling Museum ... In 1930 I began my acquaintance with the open sea. And too - I have just inspected a full-grown embalmed [whale] exhibited on a great flat car in the freight yards behind the station."
Closes with mention of a letter received from Robert G. Barr of New Zealand which was stamped "Salvaged from S. S. Tahiti Lost at Sea." Reference is made to this "salvaged" letter on the envelope that contained the [1930 Sep 11] postcard sent to Helm Spink [see prior entry]

Scope and Contents note

Undated by HPL, dated by Arkham House Pencilled notation "Oct 9, '31" in an unknown hand However, content supports assigning this to an earlier date. Refers to rejection of his manuscripts by Putnam: "I partly agree with one of their bases for rejection - that of an over-explanatory element in many of my tales." Later mentions that Lillian D. Clark is better again and that installation of steam heat at 10 Barnes Street has him living in AEPG's apartment while she is vacationing in Maine. States that W. Paul Cook "is getting stabilized psychologically & industrially - & has a position in Boston ... He was here recently, & I am not about to go to Boston to see him. He rooms in an old Georgian house in the lee of Beacon Hill"

With short P.S on verso of envelope postmarked Oct. 20, 1932. Enclosed is a newspaper photo of a herd of walrus sunning themselves on an ice flow. Closes by noting: "Belknap read my "Shadow Over Innsmouth" & thought it showed a decline in the old man's powers. Between that opinion & Comte d'Erlette's annihilation of "Witch House", I'm about ready to fade from the map. Incidentally - my present ghosting job amounts virtually to the writing of an original story" [i.e The Man of Stone for Hazel Heald]

Undated, headed "Hour of the Dark Satellite in Yaddith" only Manuscript note "Nov, 13, 1933" in RHB's hand. "I'll surely see that you get all the hand-written originals of mine that you want ... I haven't originals of 'Pickman', 'Cthulhu' & 'Colour', for I've always torn up rough draughts as soon as I get a printed copy of the equivalent text for my files. The only hand-written MSS. I have around are of unpublished minor tales ... I'll send you 'The Other Gods', 'Celephais', &c. before long. As for the 1926-7 MSS. - there are no typed copies ... If I ever do get the things typed you're welcome to the originals. I lately had a client type my story of last August - 'The Thing on the Doorstep' (which isn't very satisfactory), & am circulating the carbon amongst the gang." Scope and Contents note

Dated "All-Hallows" only Commiserates with WBT over the loss of his cat and "Sympathetic greetings are forwarded from the Kappa Alpha Tau ... the fraternity which meets on the floor of a shed across the garden below my west windows." Complains about typographical misprints: "Last summer, I was exasperated by the blunders in my W.T. story - where in one place "magical LORE" was rendered as "magical LOVE" ... This sort of slip, where the misprinted version makes a false & misleading reading instead of appearing frankly as a mistake, is of course the worst of all" [refers to "The Dreams in the Witch-House," in Weird Tales, 22, No. 1 (Jul 1933)]. Mentions: "Unusual Stories is really a wholly separate magazine from The Fantasy Fan ... I have sent in several things - as also to The Fantasy Fan"

Dated "Dec. 5" only "That 'Time Machine' spoof surely was amusing in a mild way - especially the conjectures as to the authorship. Belknap told me about it when I passed through Nieuw Nederland on my way north, &
I found a copy upon reaching #66. I fancy it must have been perpetrated by someone closely in touch with the correspondence of the group - though it would be unbecoming to make too many guesses” [refers to The Battle That Ended the Century which was composed by HPL and RH Barlow in May, 1934]

Scope and Contents note

Incomplete, leaf II (pages 3-4) only Fragment begins: "yes the Hearst anti-red editorial is certainly a gem of absurdity." Gives thanks for sending "the specimens of your recent work, which I have read with the keenest interest ... Glad to hear that 'The Cell' was received favorable mention - even if it didn't win first prize. Mentions: "my recent cinema attendance (beginning Jan. 1, 1935) has been limited to 'Don Quixote', 'Man of Aran', 'Unfinished Symphony' & 'Les Miserables'." He later
notes: "Sorry to hear that you father's recent magical performance wasn't a 100% success, & hope better luck will attend the next one." This is probably part of the incomplete letter listed below

Morgan (built 1841) is preserved at a wharf - solidly embedded in concrete as a permanent exhibit." Later mentions a visit from Charles D. Hornig on May 25th and continues: "I set out for the south on June 5 [and] ... struck De Land June 9 ... We have been on several trips - the most impressive of which was to Black Water Creek ... While you have probably seen so tropical a jungle, I fancy that you've had roughly parallel effects in the famous Dismal Swamp in your present locality"

Scope and Contents note

Elaborates on difficulties of printing
The Shadow over Innsmouth "By the way - did Hill-Billy ever get it send you them proof, or hev the printer ... do so? He said last month he was afraid they were thrown away. The second proofs - which I didn't see - were also pretty bad, & poor Hill-Billy is a-havin' fer ter set up some of the pages hisself all over again ... P.S. Get an eyeful of the enclosed Charleston folder ...
When I saw the pictures, they seemed disturbingly familiar to me - & another moment of inspection showed why! It seems that this folder was prepared by the Pres. of the Elec. Testing Laboratories, & that my letter to Eich-Si-Khah [H. C. Koenig] (with descriptive matter as requested) arrived just as it was going to press. The president liked the rough sketches of Charleston ...

hence my debut (& perhaps farewell) as an illustrator"

Scope and Contents note

The newsheet was issued every Sunday beginning August 2, 1903. Vol. 1, nos. 1-27 (2 Aug 1903 - 31 Jan 1904) contain two hand-written pages each. Vol. 3, nos. 1-15 (16 Apr - 23 Jul 1905), including an "Extra" (Monday, 17 Apr 1905), are a mixture of two and four paged hectographed issues. Vol. 3 [repeated], nos. 1-11 (30 Jul - 12 Nov 1905) are a mixture of four and six paged hectographed issues. Vol. 3 [repeated], nos. 6-12 (Jan - Jul 1906) are monthly issues in a folded and stapled format. Vol. 4, nos. 1-6 (Aug 1906 - Jan 1907) also are monthly issues. Vol. 4, no. 9 (Apr 1907), vol. 6, nos. 6-7 (Jan - Feb 1909) are a two paged newsheet issues. Although there are gaps, this file may not be as incomplete as it first appears. There is a "Notice" from HPL with these issues: "After Jan 31 '04 a long skip in the publication of the 'R.I. Journal' occurs, marked by temporary attempts to recommence it. The resumption was really begun in Ap. 16 '05 after which is was hectographed every week. In September it was made fort nightly, but it was issued irregularly. So no numbers were issued in December, and on Jan. 1 '06 it was issued as a book form monthly, On Feb. 1 colour hectographing was introduced. Which thing was abandoned in December. In January 1907 a cumulative index was published Dec-Feb (06-7).
Correspondence of was maintained. In March 1907 it reverted to the old paper form. It was dormant 1907-8. But 'began' once more Jan. 1909, then & there to end forever."

Scope and Contents note

Dated by HPL: "Nov 1 - '18." "Col. Linkaby Didd", to whom the lines are inscribed, is an imaginary character figuring frequently in the local Journal. Like Sir Roger de Coverly he is supposed to be an odd rural character, residing at 'Nooseneck Hill, in the town of Exeter' -- the most desolate and remote spot conceivable in Rhode Island. 'Col. Didd' always takes the wrong side of public questions, arguing picturesquely and illiterately, with many comic blunders and perversions of the Malaprop variety" (HPL to Reinhart Kleiner, 1918 Nov. 25, T35: 68-70).

from 1919 to 1934
AMS, 35.0 p.

Scope and Contents note
The illustrated cover was drawn by Robert H. Barlow. In a prefatory note HPL states: "This book consists of ideas, images, & quotations, hastily jotted down for possible future use in weird fiction. Very few are actually developed plots - for the most part they are merely suggestions or random impressions designed to set the memory or imagination cranking. Their sources are various - dreams, things read, casual incidents, idle conceptions, & so on." This book is inscribed: "Presented to R. H. Barlow, Esq. on May 7, 1934 - in exchange for an admirably typed copy from skilled hand." First published in Barlow's edition of The Notes & Commonplace Book employed by the late H. P. Lovecraft (Lakeport, CA: The Futile Press, 1938).

Written entirely in pencil on the versos of correspondence to HPL. Dated "Dec. 19, 1932." HPL acknowledged ghost-writing an European travelogue in a letter to Alfred M. Galpin (1934 Nov 4). "For the past year I have had such knowledge of Paris that I've felt tempted to advertise my services as a guide without ever having seen the damn place - this erudition coming from a ghost-writing job for a goof who wanted to be publicly eloquent about a trip from which he was apparently unable to extract any coherent first-hand impressions. I based my study on maps, guide-books, travel folders, descriptive volumes, & (above all) pictures - the cards secured from you forming the cream of the latter." This ghost-writing client may have been his former former wife -- Sonia.

Typescript with manuscript corrections. Dated at the end of the text: "February 28, 1921." Copy it as thou wilt -- but don't say I advised you to do it." HPL to DW, 1927 Sep 27: "I went over "Iranon" & corrected whatever stenographic slips there were -- though there weren't many. I can never cease to be grateful for your kindness in preparing the copy"). First published in The Galleon, 1, No. 5 (Jul-Aug 1935).

Pencil draft with corrections. "Begun Nov 10 1934" written above title. "Finished Feby. 22, 1935" and "Revised Feby. 24, 1935" on last page. This second draft contains extensive revisions including substitution of one-half of the first page (HPL to CAS, 1935 Mar 26, T32: 158: "Which reminds me that I've finished The Shadow Out of Time 65 pages of pencil script. I am woefully dissatisfied with it, and may destroy this version as I did the first last autumn. In my present state of doubt I am reluctant to type the thing ... "). Barlow produced a typescript of this story, which has since been lost, in August 1935 (HPL to DW, 1935 Aug 14: "Bob has just copied my Shadow out of Time "). This manuscript was donated to Brown University by Lucille Shreve in the name of June Evelyn Ripley (her sister) who probably received it from Robert H. Barlow sometime during the period that she was an anthropology student in Mexico City shortly after World War II. A heavily edited version was first published Astounding Stories, 17, No. 4 (Jun 1936).

The Statement of Randolph Carter undated

Scope and Contents note

HPL had completed writing the story by Dec. 27, 1919 (HPL to R Kleiner, 1919 Dec 27: "I have just finished a ghastly tale entitled 'The Statement of Randolph Carter', based on an actual dream of mine ...", T35:90). It was first published in The Vagrant, No. 13 (May 1920). This single-spaced typescript was probably prepared by in late-1922 or early-1923. It was one of the five typescripts that HPL submitted to Weird Tales in late-April or early-May 1923 (SL 128, HPL to JFM, May 3, 1923: "Once again I have followed a Mortonian tip ... and have slipped Weird Tales five of my hell-beaters ... Dagon, Randolph Carter, Cats of Ulthar, Hound, and Arthur Jermyn." This typescript corresponds to the version published in Weird Tales, 5, No. 2 (Feb 1925).
